

Graduate Seminar in University Teaching Winter 2011-2012

This seminar series in university teaching will prepare graduate students for an academic teaching career. The estimated time commitment is 32 hours in-class with approximately 10 hours for preparation of readings and assignments. Participants receive a certificate on successful completion of all of the requirements. There will be a modest charge for materials. Participation is limited to 25 students per section per semester.

OBJECTIVES

- To examine various approaches to teaching and current issues in higher education.
- To plan two mini lessons and practice different teaching strategies in a supportive environment, and to benefit from peer feedback and self-evaluation.
- To develop a syllabus for a course that you would like to teach in the future based on a principled approach to course design.
- To articulate your own teaching philosophy statement as a first step towards developing a teaching dossier (to be included in applications for academic positions).
